A: The latest FSC generator for the CIC also supports maps for the CIC, although it is limited to maps for the EU only. It is called the 11MC Motorrad Maps and you can get it at In addition to maps for the entire EU, it has maps for different countries as well as a GPS for navigation. So if you are not interested in the maps for the entire EU, this is a more limited but still useful FSC. Q: Object members data filter I'm fairly new to object-orientated programming, and I'm struggling to understand why this code works... For some reason the variables i and ii seem to be undefined, even when they seem to be passed in from main. I'd like to understand why this is, if anyone can help #include using namespace std; class account { public: float account; float transaction_total; float interest; account(float total); ~account(); }; int main() { float i, ii; account(5); cin >> i; cin >> ii; return 0; } account::account(float total) { account = total; } account::~account() { transaction_total = 0.0; interest = 0.0; } A: account(5) doesn't actually make an instance of your account class. It only provides a temporary that is stored for use at a later time, rather like a stack variable. This is called "constructor function," and the temporary object that is made is destroyed when the function returns. Because your constructor doesn't actually return anything, the temporary object remains in scope after the function returns, but it is automatically destroyed at the end of the block. 3da54e8ca3
