Day Scanner: Iteration 1 [Latest-2022]

Steam Time August 31, 2013 19:03 GMT The large scale, rough-cast, Australian Stock Trains were first introduced in 1927, on the Sydney to Newcastle route and were of 6ft-4ft width and covered with passenger cars in various designs by the various private railway operators. Over the years, they covered almost all of the country including Adelaide, Brisbane, Melbourne and Perth. The railway operators were constantly investing in upgrading the rolling stock from the original steam coaches to current day carriages. For this pack, I have used the entire 528-strong class from 'new build' to fully renovated from 1994 and converted it into the Victorian Railways black livery and with the lines painted in the old Australian Railways light blue colour. Additionally, I have included the Victorian Railways metal fittings and decals as well as the old New South Wales Railways yellow paintwork, which was also covered with Australian Railways passenger carriages. I hope you like this pack. It is my first, but certainly not my last Steam Time add-on pack. I am mainly a train builder with a passion for steam locomotives and tend to enjoy adding as much detail and authenticity to the rolling stock as possible. Please let me know if you like what you see. Many of the parts in this pack are old old old. I have had to dismantle the old vehicles, replace the decals, remake the metalwork and the painting in Blender (a first for me)! I've been planning this pack for a long time, having seen an old Freightliner wagon at a local storage facility, with the correct shape and height of walls, but the wrong colour scheme. After trying to find a replacement vehicle, I decided to piece it together myself. It took me about two months, and after many tests, tweaking and time delays, here we are! This pack includes a working model of this Freightliner wagon, in both First Australian Railways and Victorian Railways liveries! There's also a decal sheet with a large variety of elements for it, as well as metal parts, including the brake lines. In order to get the correct 'yoke' shape, I took this V5000 train wagon that has been left derelict for more than 10 years, and added the Victorian Railways decal on it and then added a hand-made rake to get the correct shape. I have even included a decal sheet for one of the high level side

Rakitin Victor Nikolaievich Rakitin (; 1851-1923) was a Russian theatre director who worked in St. Petersburg and Moscow theatres. A strong proponent of the new realism in Russian theatre, he played an important role in the Russian theatre in the second decade of 20th century. Biography Early years Rakitin was born in Kharkiv. In the course of the Russo-Turkish War (1877-1878), he graduated from military high school. At the age of twenty-three he became a student in the Count Leo Tolstoy's Brotherhood of Tolstoyans. He was fascinated with Tatlin's project of The Monument. It was here that his career as a stage director began. He was to give five performances of one of Tatlin's designs, in order to test the effect of this visionary constructivist art. Career After an attempt to become an actor, Rakitin was engaged as a stage director in Karl Gartenberg's theatrical troupe in St. Petersburg in 1884. From 1895 to 1900, he was associated with Rublev Theatre as an assistant director and dramaturg. In Moscow, he was director-general of the Plekhanov Studios for a brief time in the 1890s. This was an organization that trained naive schoolboys and young men, mainly from the poorer strata of society, into stage actors. It was briefly headed by the anti-Menshevik agitator Nikolai Chernyshevsky, and the most famous of its pupils were Lev Narsky and Konstantin Stanislavski. The Lyceum (named after the Neoclassical Academy of Musical Culture) was founded in 1883 by Pyotr Rymarevich; it included a school, a theatre and a pharmacy, and Rakitin taught at the pharmacy. Rakitin's teachers at this venue were Mihail Bakhtin (then A. I. Grigoryevsky), and Vladimir Makogon. The Ballet In 1903, he was entrusted with the creation of a ballet troupe that was to replace the ballet of the recently disbanded Nihilist club. Due to the disappearance of the latter, he had to find artists who would become professional dancers and choreographers. This troupe was called The Ballet and had performers whose names included: Vera Galaktova, Pavel Yesaulka (a ballet
