For instance, the browser allows you to access public or private pages that require you to login, so you can enjoy the convenience of a personalized web experience without exposing personal information. Using Firefox, you can surf the web in private mode, as well as in public with no restrictions. This basically means that content will be loaded in a hidden frame and will not be indexed by search engine. It is the presence of this frame that gives Firefox a different outlook when compared to other web browsers. The difference can be found in its search engine bar, which is hidden and won't appear for users. This means that, during a search, you will have to ask yourself how the contents of a page will appear when they are converted to the new frame. It must be noted that the hidden frame is not only an advantage, but is also related to the amount of space that it takes up. Thus, it can also be seen as a feature that makes Firefox a unique browser. Talking about the Firefox browser, it is a very fast browser that can perform well even under stressful conditions. This is why it is recommended to have more than one Firefox instance running at the same time and that is another advantage of the application. When accessing Firefox, the browser will display the homepage, search engine bar, bookmark bar and home button. You can also easily access frequently used web pages and add them to your favorites. The application is updated to versions, and the first update (if available) is always free. You can find the latest version at the official Mozilla website. The installation process is quite easy, and it only requires you to have an SD card that is over 3 GB in size. The installation is placed within the /sdcard/firefox directory. Startup times are consistent and, by all means, fast. The browser does not tend to hang, and navigation between pages is both smooth and fast. Over its 18 years, Firefox has been used by millions of users that love the browser. Firefox is a major browser, especially in relation to tab-based browsers
