He's the perfect fit, too." With all the off-the-field stuff bubbling up, it's hard to focus on anything else. Still, Griffiths always seems to be able to balance just being a football player with being a human being. He's that way with everyone, but it seems even more pronounced as the weeks go by. "It's like having someone you know in your family," Faulk said. "When he gets around a certain age, he has to take the advice that he gives out to me. It's basically, 'Hey man, lay off the weed. You're a grown man. Don't be doing that.' "That's just the reality of the situation." Griffiths still has only one stressor left: he doesn't want to give up football. That's why seeing Faulk go down in the first half of the Wolves win over the ThunderCats in Week 13 was so tough. Faulk's injury continued a string of bad luck for the team, but it's one that has no tangible effect on Griffiths. $.
